INTEREST CATEGORIES

USER: End-users require the use of the standard to accomplish their required functions or responsibilities. This category includes agencies and personnel such as those that capture fingerprints, perform forensic analysis on biometric samples, administer and work with the storage and processing of information; plan or develop or procure their organization's biometric or forensic or laboratory analysis system.

PRODUCER: This category includes developers and vendors of hardware and/or software for the analysis of biometric and/or forensic data. This includes organizations that develop and/or market software to produce ANSI/NIST-ITL conformant transactions, as well as those that offer biometric matchers, workstations, DNA processing units, and other equipment. This category includes individuals or organizations that provide and integrate one or more manufacturer's equipment and/or software to function as a unified system.

CONSULTANT: This category encompasses private individuals or organizations that provide advice and system analysis functions to other agencies or organizations regarding the planning, procurement, acquisition, and use of equipment, software, or systems. Generally those canvassers listed as consultants have no relationship with their client organization other than as a hired contractor.

GENERAL INTEREST: This category includes those that have a direct or material interest in the development of the standards activity but are not included in any of the other categories. Examples include other Standards Developing Organizations, universities, research organizations and groups.
